

TRILLIUM HOUSE

Trillium House is home to The Nature Foundation at Wintergreen. It houses exhibits for children and adults, the Nature Center Shoppe, a children's area, and interactive learning stations. It is the central meeting place for The Nature Foundation's activities.

ROBINS NOOK

This children's play area is geared toward youngsters with an inquisitive mind and a desire to explore nature. There is a puppet stage, games, an art center, natural objects to see and touch, and a children's library.

EXHIBITS

Trillium House includes many interactive exhibits. Say hello to Maizey, the resident corn snake, see native birds up close in our Birder's Gallery, recreate native wildlife tracks, and touch fur from wild mammals. Discover a typical Native American dwelling in our region and let your children step back in time as they get a sense of what pioneer days were like in the Blue Ridge Mountains. Explore the process of propagating native plants with our Plant Propagation Project.

THE NATURE CENTER SHOPPE

The Shoppe offers a bit of everything. From a wide array of handmade gifts and nature related products to hiking guides, we have something for everyone.

Native plants are essential to the ecological health of the Wintergreen community. The Foundation's Plant Propagation Project advocates the use of native plants by collecting seeds, germinating and raising plants and shrubs. These native plants are available for purchase. Nature Foundation members may request a survey of what plants are currently on their property and advice on using native plants in that space.

ENDOWMENT

The Nature Foundation's work ensures the long-term stewardship of Wintergreen's natural beauty as it manages the communities' rare ecosystems and assists with management recommendations for Wintergreen's forests.
